

Rick Barry

Rick Barry is one of the most celebrated players in NBA history — not only for his game, but also for the competitiveness he brought to the court. During his 14-year professional career, four in the ABA (Oakland, Washington and the New York Nets) and ten in the NBA (San Francisco, Golden State and Houston), Barry was a 12-time All-Star. His deadeye jump shot was one of basketball's most feared weapons and enabled him to become the only player in history to lead the NCAA, ABA and NBA in scoring.

In a combined ABA/NBA career, Barry tallied 25,279 points and received nine All-NBA/ABA First Team honors. In 1987, the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame inducted Rick as a player, and in 1988; the Golden State Warriors retired his #24 jersey. Barry is one of the 50 Greatest NBA Players. His unorthodox underhanded free throw style enabled him to finish his career with the second best accuracy in the history of the NBA, 90%.

Rick began his broadcasting career after his rookie season. His articulate style and insightful perceptions provided a refreshing and honest view of sports. He broadcast on radio and television for a number of stations, sports and even non-sports events. Along with his broadcasting work, Rick is also heavily involved in various other business ventures. He is an owner of half a dozen business ventures and has recently turned his passion for adventure into a business which specializes in fishing, hunting, golf and other sporting adventures.

All four of Rick's grown sons have played profession basketball. At one time, Jon, Brent and Drew were in the NBA, becoming the first family to have a father and three sons play in the league.

Rick is an excellent motivational speaker and basketball clinician. He enjoys, fishing, hunting, road and mountain biking, is a low handicap golfer and an outstanding tennis player. No matter what event your organization is planning, Rick is an excellent choice.
