

Graduations Might Be More Normal

By Dr. R. Pletsch

CPS has issued graduation guidelines for both elementary and high school ceremonies. High School graduations may be held on or after June 12th, 2021, while Kindergarten and 8th graders may graduate on or after June 17th, 2021. Say what you may about graduations, but it is something that most families look forward to.

School administrators have recently received pages of directives that they must follow in efforts to be fair and safe during graduation programs. School leadership may choose from virtual, online or in person ceremonies. The schools may choose for their in-person ceremony either indoor or outdoor ceremonies. The school leadership must consider the number of graduates and the space available to invite at least two guests for each graduate. Things like social distancing and accessibility are of prime concern.

Some of the schools have worked this out already. But remember every school's graduation might look different based often on the size and shape of the school's campus. Some things are out of the principal's hands. CPS warns that the guidelines they have received might still change if the Mayor or Governor reinstate more restrictions. As of today, the Governor hopes to open Illinois completely by June 11th, but the Mayor says she has estimates of July 4th. If things keep going well with the vaccine, they might agree on a date.

I understand it is hard, but you must be patient. The principals will let you know as soon as possible. Remember they have a lot to consider and must get their plan approved by other administrators.

Free Bike Riding Classes For Adults

The Chicago Department of Transportation is expanding its "Learn to Bike Ride" educational program for adults by adding more opportunities through an advanced level course, and launching a new feature that will help adults "Learn to Commute." This year's first class will be held June 1st, and the public can sign up for free classes taught by CDOT's Streets Are For Everybody Ambassadors that are scheduled at three locations through the end of August.

The growth in interest in bike-riding in the last year is attributed in part to the COVID-19 pandemic that has caused the public to seek out safe and socially-distanced forms of transportation and recreation.

CDOT and its bike-share system Divvy last year launched a citywide expansion, starting on the far South Side in 2020, and extending to the Southwest and Northwest Sides in 2021. The expansion included the introduction of 3,500 new e-bikes last year, with another 3,500 coming in 2021. CDOT added 29 miles of new bikeways in 2020, about half of them in the Divvy expansion areas. CDOT is finalizing installation plans for 2021 but expects to complete about 40 miles of new bikeways in the year.

These free bicycle riding classes, which are funded through Divvy sponsorship revenue from the City's bikeshare partner Lyft, are offered to anyone 16-years-old or over at three locations on the West Side starting on June 1. The two-hour class allows pre-registered participants to learn how to position themselves when riding in the bike lane, how to plan the safest routes, signaling and more.

Following are the dates, times and locations of the 2021 "Learn to Ride" classes: Tuesdays from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Divvy Station, 300 N Central Park Ave at Garfield Park Conservatory; June 1st through Aug. 31st. Thursdays, from 6 to 8 p.m., at the Divvy Station, 500 N. Sacramento Blvd. June 3rd through Aug. 26th.

Saturday mornings from 10 a.m. to noon, at 1401 S. Sacramento Dr. at Douglass Park on June 5th and 19th; July 3rd, 17th and 31st; and August 14th and 28th.

Saturday morning from 10 a.m. to noon, at the Divvy Station; 500 N. Sacramento Blvd. on June 12th and 26th; July 10th and 24th; and August 7th and 21st.

For individuals 16 and older, who have successfully completed a "Learn to Ride" class and are looking to build confidence riding on the streets of Chicago, CDOT will be offering "Advanced Learn to Ride" classes at Seward Park, 375 W. Elm Street on June 12th and 26th; July 10th and 24th; August 7th and 21st from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.

An ornate box turtle being weighed during a health examination. The species is threatened in the state of Illinois.

This year marks the 15th anniversary of the largest health survey of box turtles in North America by Chicago Zoological Society and University of Illinois Researchers. The study furthers conservation efforts to save the ornate box turtle (one of two species of box turtles in Illinois), which has experienced habitat destruction and population decline due to human encroachment.

Once found in nearly half of the state's 102 counties, the ornate box turtle now inhabits fewer than 10. Lee County, including the 3,800-acre Nachusa Grasslands, is one of the last remaining homes for the species.

"We are extremely grateful to have connected with John and his dogs," said Allender. "The dogs have been immensely beneficial in finding the turtles at a much faster rate than we can. They are a tremendous tool for conservation." The four-legged volunteers can sniff out 2.5 turtles per search hour, compared to the one turtle every four or five hours for a biologist.

Once the dogs located and retrieved the turtles, the researchers began their health assessments on the 4- to 5-inch-long terrapins. Ornate box turtles have a domed, dark brown carapace (top shell). Short yellow lines and dashes radiate from the center of each shell segment.

The turtle examinations, included collecting blood samples, swabbing the mouth, measuring height and length, evaluating weight and body condition, and taking an overall visual analysis of each turtle's shell, eyes, nose, throat, and legs. This data also helps evaluate the health of the ecosystem.

The species can live into their mid-to-late-50s, so up to 70 percent of the turtles in a given year may have been previously evaluated. This continuity helps researchers understand how health indicators change over time. The shell is notched by cutting small pieces from sections along the outer edge, to provide identification.

Since the project began in 2006, data has been collected on approximately 500 ornate box turtles and 3,500 eastern box turtles throughout Illinois and Tennessee.

In 2009, the ornate box turtle was listed as a threatened species in Illinois for several reasons, including habitat loss due to agriculture and development, mortality from vehicle strikes, and overcollection for the pet trade. In Illinois, it is illegal to own an ornate box turtle without a permit. Brookfield Zoo acquired two female turtles in 2010 after they were confiscated at a pet store in the northwest suburbs by U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service officials.
