

Teacher Professional Development

By Dr. R. Pletsch

All schools try to improve teaching by providing teachers with the methodology necessary. Most often, there are classes in Reading, Math or Code of Conduct when a new series or program is introduced to a school or district. This year I feel a need to give teachers special help because many of the younger staff members have never taught in what we consider a normal situation. They have never had the pressure of 30 students with comments and distractions that cannot be taken care of with the Mute button.

Some of the students returning could be so excited that socializing will be more important at first than learning. They will have the freedom to move around, many will go to PE or Art, have bathroom breaks, lunchroom and compared to their front room at home that is a lot of distractions.

I have attended more of these professional development meetings than I can count. Some, of course, are better than others. Sadly, I attended a few that more of the people were paying attention to their phones than the speakers. We talk about the kids. I also presented at dozens of these, suburban, private and CPS. Most private and suburban audiences were attentive.

They never thought someone from CPS could give them anything but help seeing that they survived. However, in CPS schools I announced that the first one to turn on their phone would come up, introduce themselves and take over. Obviously, that never occurred.

I recently spoke with a southwest suburban school board member who as a kid had spent many hours in our home. He says that their district lets the individual schools choose their professional development, but helps them find the instructors. This goes along with an article by Elizabeth Heubeck from EdWeek. With her conversations nationwide, she believes that right now the teachers are most worried about the emotional impact that the pandemic has caused for the students.

To such worry she believes that professional development will be targeted in that way. She believes that seeing that many districts are requesting this, that we must "take care of the adults so they can best take care of the kids".

The CPS schools usually start the year with days for professional development. This worry about their mental outlook could be of prime importance for those days.

Latest Initiative To Reopen The City

Mayor Lori E. Lightfoot announced the launch of Open Chicago, initial programming will feature activated and pop-up spaces for residents to enjoy.

The initiative's mission centers on communicating Chicago's safe reopening strategy, for public amenities and private venues, activating public spaces with arts, culture, and recreation, expanding outdoor dining, ensuring businesses can return to offices and in-person events.

Due to this improvement in reopening metrics and the ongoing distribution of the COVID-19 vaccine, Chicago will be loosening Phase Four regulations.

Most Chicago industries will have the ability to increase capacity effectively immediately, including the following changes:

Restaurants and bars: Indoor capacity can increase to the lesser of 50% or 100 people.

Spectator events, theater, and performing arts: Large indoor venues, including the United Center, can now operate at 25% capacity.

Meetings, conferences, and conventions: Large indoor venues can now operate at the lesser of 25% or 250 people.

Places of worship: Large indoor venues can now operate at 25% capacity.

Festivals and general admission outdoor spectator events: Operate at 15 people per 1,000 sq. ft.

Flea and farmers markets: Operate at 25% capacity or 15 people per 1,000 sq. ft.

The full reopening guidelines can be found at Chicago.gov/reopening.

Guests that are fully vaccinated - defined as 14 days after receiving their final vaccine dose - will not count towards capacity limits at private events such as weddings. Events must be at a licensed business, they cannot be open to the public, and guests must RSVP prior to the event.

Business owners will be responsible for verifying that exempted guests are fully vaccinated and keep records.

The relaunch of the 9th season of Night Out in the Parks this summer will feature more than 100 of Chicago's talented artists and organizations performing in over 350 outdoor cultural arts events.

From hip-hop to folkloric dance, and even Tightrope Fairies, new arts partners M.A.D.D. Rhythms and Open Architecture Chicago's Poetic Platforms will join returning favorites, like the Midnight Circus, Deeply Rooted Dance Theater, and the Chicago Philharmonic Society, on stages in parks citywide. A Mother's Day Memory

On this beautiful day of family love and affection, daughters and sons honor their mothers, parents remember their own mothers, grandparents dream of a mother's touch when they were children so many years ago.

We can each choose to give our mother the gift of being young and beautiful again, through memory, for these thoughts are as real as the events they recall.

And when you take flowers to a mother's grave, remember how, with dignity and compassion, you were assisted in saying goodbye to the "mom" who always helped you through life.

These memories are real today too, for the professional staff at our funeral home never wavers in its dedication to serving you and your family.

May your Mother's Day memories live on for generations.
