Some Fears Related To Returning To School

By Dr. R. Pletsch

In her college years, I tried to get my daughter to take Education classes. Quite simply, she said "No. I don't want to teach school, all you do is come home and do school work and worry about how some things affect us and other kids". Well it's still the same, years after retirement and this week I had conversations with several educators and involved parents from several different districts.

I learned how many area schools have different approaches trying to ease the kids out of strict-ly at-home based learning. An issue in our community seems to be that the parents fear that the next group of immigrants could bring a strong comeback of Covid and as some parents told me, they are hoping their chil-dren don't play with new kids that don't speak English.

Hoping not to sound too cruel, the parents said that their kids are already in fear of taking the two shots because there have been so many programs for months on TV talking about reactions to the vaccines. The parents worry that they'd like the new kids to be accepted like any other new American, but they hope there could be some type of quarantine to make sure they are not infected. They realize the desperate move by some of these people who drop their 3 and 5 year olds down a 14 foot wall without supervision. We don't want your desperation to cause an increase in the nandemic.

Another issue that we need to talk about is the seemingly upward trend of anti-Oriental violence. A few administrators are worried about the way it is portrayed in the press as being caused by White bigotry. It has been pointed out in the press that the Department of Justice has issued its report on race and violent crimes. Violent crimes are most often perpetrated by people of the same race. Most violent crimes on Blacks are by Blacks. Most violent crimes on Whites are by Whites. Most violent crimes against Hispanics are by

Hispanics. Ĥowever, most violent crimes against Orientals are caused by Blacks, about 75%. I think the people deserve to know this. Hopefully this narrative won't even be an issue soon. But the young ones and their parents deserve to know the truth so they can deal with the

I do not want this article to make anyone feel differently but these truthful stats by the government need to be out there. We need to stand up for each other and oppose violence anyway

Beach Cleanup at Montrose Harbor

As a pair of endangered Great Lakes Piping Plovers begin their spring migration ahead of nesting and breeding season, local conservation part-ners in the city of Chicago are joining forces for a special habitat restora-tion effort on Montrose Beach. On April 11th, starting at 10 a.m., volunteers can join a beach cleanup to prepare the habitat for the birds and help give this year's potential chicks the best chance at survival.

Shedd Aquarium will be hosting the cleanup as part of their Action Days program, in partnership with Chicago Ornithological Society, Chicago Audubon Society, Illinois Ornithological Society, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, IL Department of Natural Resources, and Chicago Park District.

The plover pair, dubbed Monty and Rose, was first spotted in 2019 at Montrose Beach. Despite numerous challenges, with the help of countless volunteers, the pair successfully raised hatchlings and returned the following year to do so again. Volunteers, conservation groups and birders are eager for their arrival.

All are welcome to volunteer and no prior experience is required, but registration in advance is required at ActionDays@ sheddaquarium.org

Volunteers can also take action for animals at Shedd Aquarium Action Days to restore nearby beaches, waterways, and forest preserves throughout April and May.

New Maier Exhibit At History Museum

The Chicago History Museum, 1601 N. Clark st. is featuring a collection of many never-before seen works by world-renown photographer Vivian Maier in an upcoming exhibition, Vivian Maier: In Color, opening to the public on May 8th.

Maier worked as a nanny to several Chicago families and took extensive photos, documenting intimate moments of the city and its people. Vivian Maier: In Color will illuminate Maier's unique portfolio. While her focus of attention varied, she approached all of her work with unwavering confidence, revealing parallels, intersections and tensions. Following her death in 2009, Maier's photographs previously discovered in her abandoned storage locker were first displayed for the public. She rose to posthumous international acclaim for her photography that expertly documented the people, landscapes, light, and development of New York, her hometown, and Chicago where she settled, with remarkable attention to detail. Her work is now used widely in research and curriculum and has been celebrated in at least 42 exhibitions around the world, including one on display at the Chicago History Museum from 2012-2017, Vivian Maier's Chicago.

The new exhibit features more than 65 color images from the 1950s-1970s, most of which from art collectors Jeffrey Goldstein, John Maloof, and Ron Slattery. Clips from film and a series of sound bites and quotes featuring Maier's voice will also be included.

Last year, the Chicago History Museum acquired nearly 1,800 Vivian Maier color slides, negatives and transparencies from Chicagobased artist and art collector Jeffrey Goldstein. The collection primarily depicts people and scenes in Chicago from the 1950s-1970s. The museum worked closely with Goldstein and Vivian Maier's Estate to accept a donation of photographs and preserve them for public use. The acquisition gives the public access to many neverbefore-seen images on the Museum's image portal.

A grant from The Gladys Krieble Delmas Foundation promotes long term preservation, collections access and interpretive digital output such as blog posts and an online exhibition.

Art on the Mart Spring Programs

Spring 2021 Programming of the Art on the Mart projections will feature The Adler Planetarium, through July 4th and Art Institute of Chicago through May 19th at 8:30 and 9:30 p.m.

Astrographics will explore ways in which humans conceptualize and visualize their universe, and how that has changed over time. The piece will consist of four movements (Earth, Other Worlds, Stars and Beyond) which will transport the viewer from Earth to other planets and stars, then out to deeper and more speculative realms. Each of these movements features scientific visualizations based on real data showing the scale of the universe.

The visuals, produced by the Adler Planetarium, are woven together with imagery from the world's telescopes and works on paper from the Adler's collections. Accompanying the projection will be music from the Sun Ra Arkestra archives from the Experimental Sound Studio. Astrographicsartistically showcases both historic perceptions of space and more recent advances in the understanding of the universe.

In conjunction with the Art Institute of Chicago's exhibition Monet and Chicago, Art on the MART illuminates the city's historic riverfront building with projections of six iconic paintings by famed Impressionist Claude Monet, including Monet's Water Lilies and Stacks of Wheat, accompanied by the classical music composition "Clair de Lune" by Claude Debussy.
Art on theMART will also project captivating portraits by contemporary American artist Bisa Butler in alignment with the Art Institute of Chicago's exhibition Bisa Butler: Portraits.

Introduction For Zoo's Polar Bears

Hope, a 5-year-old female polar bear who arrived at Brookfield Zoo this past January, and Hudson, the zoo's 14-yearold male polar bear, were recently introduced. When Hope first arrived from Utah's Hogle Zoo, she was able to explore and get acclimated to her new home at the Great Bear Wilderness. Over the past several weeks, animal care staff began allowing the two polar bears to see and smell each other through mesh barriers behind the scenes before giving them access together in one of the outdoor habitats.

We are happy to see that the introduction between Hudson and Hope is going well," said Amv Roberts, senior curator of mammals for the Chicago Zoological Society, which manages Brookfield Zoo. While the two bears are getting to know each other, guests may see them engaged in a variety of normal behaviors, including open-mouth displays, roaring, chuffing (a rapid jaw movement), and following one another.' It's also a positive sign that they are eating together and sleeping close. To allow them more space, for the immediate future, the bears also will have access to an indoor pregnant. The maternity den area at Great Bear Wilderness was specifically designed in the shape and dimensions of actual dens in the wild. If she does give birth, the area is equipped with cameras to allow animal care staff to observe the mom and cub(s) without disturbing them.

hydrangeas, peonies, tulips and alyssum.

The Lincoln Park Commission constructed the Lincoln Park Conservatory in phases between 1890 and 1895, replacing a small greenhouse that dated from the 1870s.Na-tionally renowned archi-tect Joseph Lyman Silsbee designed the Conservatory in collaboration with architect M.E. Bell.

A "paradise under glass," the Conservatory supported "a luxuriant tropical growth, blending the whole into a natural grouping of Nature's loveliest forms." Historically, aquatic plants propagated in tanks in the Conservatory were planted outside, in artificially-heated lily ponds. The exotic plants were so popular that in 1897, the Egyptian government requested seeds from Lincoln Park's water lilies. Designed both to showcase exotic plants and grow the thousands of plants needed for use in the parks, the Conservatory offers visitors a tropical experience within its four display houses: Palm House, Fern Room, Orchid House and Show House, which is home to the annual flower shows. Admission is free. For more information, visit www.chicagoparkdistrict.com.

National 9-1-1 Education Month

Calling 9-1-1 in an emergency is vital to getting the help needed. During the help needed. ing April, which is designated as National 9-1-1 Education Month, the Office of Emergency Management and Communications is increasing public outreach efforts. The program encourages all to learn how callers can help 9-1-1 dispatchers provide appropriate resources.

OEMC will honor Call takers and Dispatchers during National Telecommunicators Week, April 11th-17th.

Often callers are in distress, which may cause frustration with the information gathering being done by 9-1-1 personnel.

Sign up at www.SMART911.com or via the mobile app.: Why is this helpful?

The free, voluntary and secure service allows individuals and families to provide personal, medical, or situational information when they call 9-1-1 to help first responders assist in the case of an emergency. The profile vou create is displayed to the call taker when you call from the registered phone number.

Try to stay calm, listen carefully: Do your best to remain calm, give as much information as you can and follow all instructions. In an emergency, seconds matter, so being knowledgeable and prepared can make all the difference. Knowing what to expect when you call 9-1-1 can help reduce fear and feelings of helplessness in an emergency.

Know how to give information: Give detailed description of situation/offenders, etc. including sex, age, height, weight, clothing, tattoos, scars/marks, hair, face, or complexion. Describe vehicles such as make, color, plate number or direction of escape.

Teach kids about 9-1-1: Educate children about calling 9-1-1 including: listening to instructions, knowing their address and floor/apartment number, any medical conditions of those in the home, and understanding that they should not hang up until the call taker tells them.

Replacement For Lead Water Line

If you live in a house or two-flat built before 1986, there is a high likelihood that your water service line is made of lead unless it was replaced during renovation or an addition.

Chicago has commissioned an ongoing technical report to help replace the city's almost 400,000 lead service lines over time that transport water from the water main in the street into homes. Meanwhile, the City is taking applications for two lead service line replacement programs for homeowners who would like to replace their lead service lines are being accepted.

If a residential homeowner wants to hire a contractor and remove the existing lead service line, the City is launching a program to waive the permit fees for the project which could amount to a savings of up to $3,100. Additionally, the City will attach the new service line to the water main and provide a free water meter for the contractor to install, if there isn't already one in place. To qualify, the request for the fee waiver must be a standalone and not made in conjunction with a home renovation or expansion.

Commercial and mixed use commercial locations are not eligible at this time.

You can select your own plumber or refer to a list of plumbing contractors licensed to work in Chicago when you submit your application at leadsafechicago.org/leadservice-line-replacement.
