

Colorado Resilience Collaborative

The Colorado Resilience Collaborative (CRC) at the University of Denver is an interdisciplinary initiative that supports those impacted by targeted violence, including identity-based violence, hate crimes, violent extremism and domestic terrorism. Through trauma-informed, culturally responsive and inclusive approaches, we promote understanding, healing, and help for individuals, agencies, and communities affected by targeted violence. We work to increase community capacity to identify, prevent and disrupt targeted violence.

The CRC utilizes a multi-disciplinary approach to address and combat targeted violence through research, education, consultation, and collaboration.

In addition, we work to develop collaborative partnerships with a wide variety of organizations in order to support personal, social, cultural, and political action

TRAININGS

The 101 Training

A large scale overview of the general statistics and trends of targeted violence activity in the Colorado region, definitions of targeted violence, violent extremism, hate crimes, bias-motivated crimes and events, and exploration of basic response strategies.

The 201 Training

An advanced, in-depth exploration designed to support an organization or group's development of a response to incidents of targeted violence as well as equip participants with the skills and knowledge they need in order to use their professional experience in a response team.

CONSULTATION

We offer:

- In depth exploration of concerning behavior, including individual and organizational needs
- Guidance on possible actions and professionals to involve
- Referrals, resources, educational materials, training opportunities for individuals and teams

*All services are free and can be deidentified, anonymous, or hypothetical.

CONTACT US WITH ANY QUESTIONS by phone: 303-871-3042 and email: GSPP.CRC@du.edu
Visit our website at: <https://psychology.du.edu/counseling-consultation/colorado-resilience-collaborative>