

Children Live With Irony Too

By Dr. R. Pletsch

Life is strange enough for experienced adults, but then think about our students. Irony touches us much. You can think of numerous examples like the more the officials deny extraterrestrials the more people seem to believe in them.

Bring it closer to our recent history. We just experienced a lady who convinced many people on the importance of sending money to her to help Black Lives Matter. But she took $4 million to buy three houses, then resigned. For some reason, people on TV are always talking about the need to wear masks, even for years, but the more they talk about it, the less that people wear them.

How about the more we have politicians talk about unity, the farther apart we grow. The more we hear about defund the police, not only are more police being hired nationwide, but due to the protests, the police are being paid overtime and making more money than ever imagined.

These are truly ironic times. What you do to bring about change seems to have the opposite effect. Educators worked for years to limit cell phones in classrooms. Now they are almost everywhere and the age for kids getting cell phones is getting lower and lower.

Did you ever think there would be a time when a cop could get in trouble for chasing a criminal? Or that TV commercials would hire little kids to tell their parents "no" then even run away from them and the kid is the star. Then we wonder why many youth are confused and in ways using an old-fashioned term, spoiled.

You can think of many other examples, probably better than mine. Maybe even draw your own conclusions. But I think it is an issue worthy of talk and thought. I believe consistency is a good way to raise stable children. This can be hard, especially if both parents do not cohabitate. The overriding issue is always that the child should feel loved and that they feel the parent leads them in correct principles.

Dance Company Offers Screenings

Hubbard Street Dance Chicago's Season 43: A Virtual Homecoming will conclude with the world premiere of Greener Grass, a full-company work choreographed and directed by former company dancer Jie-Hung Connie Shiau and featuring original music and composition by Jerome Begin and videography and editing by Kevin Michael Briggs.

Shiau sites the seed of this work as witnessing the establishment of..."re-education camps," referred to by some as concentration camps, to forcibly contain Uyghurs, Kazakhs, and other traditionally Muslim minority groups in China's Xinjiang Autonomous Zone. From her perspective, the insufficient effort and failure by world leaders to recognize and condemn this violent act leads to the necessity of the piece. Her hope for this work is to raise awareness of this humanitarian crisis.

Greener Grass will premiere on June 24th, at 7:30 p.m. and will have additional screenings on June 26th at 7:30 p.m. and June 27th at 2 p.m. The performance will be live streamed on Vimeo and include a post-show Q&A. Admission is free, find out more and register at hubbardstreetdance.com beginning June 11th.

Pappas Unveils Debt Burden

M. PAPPAS

Property owners for the first time can find out what portion of local government debt falls on them, thanks to a new, online tool created by Cook County Treasurer Maria Pappas.

"Most reports identify government debt as an amount per person," Pappas said. "My latest study takes a more targeted approach by showing debt in relation to each property."

The tool reveals that Willis Tower carries local government debt of nearly $289 million, equal to 41.5% of the skyscraper's $697 million value. A Riverdale house carries $31,800 in local debt, equal to 48% of its $67,000 value. And the debt on a house on Hodgkins has $127,400 in debt, equal to 25.7% of its $496,000 value.

By contrast, the debt on properties in more affluent, lower-tax areas, like Barrington Hills and Winnetka, falls below 10% of the value of the properties in those locations.

These new calculations are available at cookcountytreasurer.com, where property owners can click the purple box on the homepage and search their address to see their local debt burden compared to the value of their home in both dollar and percentage amounts.

The new methodology also allowed Pappas to better compare the overall debt burdens borne by residents of any Cook County city or village. That exercise revealed the burden of local government debt varies greatly, with generally heavier burdens in less-affluent suburbs where the populations are more than 50% Black or Latino. The taxes tend to be much higher in many of those minority areas, an indication that more debt leads to higher property taxes.

"Property purchases in Cook County come with a hidden credit card balance, in the form of local government debt," Pappas said. "Property owners end up paying down that debt, on top of also covering their mortgage, utility and maintenance costs."

Sheriff Rescue Unit Locates 1000th Youth

The Cook County Sheriff's Police Child Rescue Unit located its 1,000th missing youth in care on Wednesday, announced Cook County Sheriff Thomas J. Dart.

"Youth in the state's care who are missing are extremely vulnerable to trafficking, drugs and violence," said Sheriff Dart. "We must do everything in our power to try and locate them, protect them and help them succeed in life. They are our children too."

Dart created a specialized unit in 2012 to look for missing youth in the care of the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services as he also called for a state audit into how the agency was handling missing and abducted children. The results of that audit revealed that previous DCFS administrations often failed to report missing youth in a timely manner and sometimes were not reported at all.

The National Center for Missing & Exploited Children reports one in six endangered runaways in America to be likely sex trafficking victims. As of May 25th, there were more than 150 missing youth in care with outstanding judicial orders to find them.

In 2016, DCFS child welfare specialists began partnering with Sheriff's Police under the Child Rescue Unit to locate missing youth in care – a first-of-its-kind unit in the state to address the problem. The CRU also assists the Chicago Children's Advocacy Center and provides human trafficking awareness training to social services agencies throughout the county.

The most recent youth in care located by the CRU were two girls, ages

June 19th Reopening For Cultural Center

The Department of Cultural Affairs and Special Events announced the historic restoration of the landmark Chicago Cultural Center, 78 E. Washington street, to reclaim two lost interiors decorated by the Tiffany Glass and Decorating Company: the Grand Army of the Republic Memorial Hall and Rotunda.

The museum-quality restoration of the art glass dome and decorative finishes is made possible by a generous grant of services valued at $15,425,000 to the City. The Chicago Cultural Center is home to two magnificent stained-glass domes; the restoration of the Tiffany dome in Preston Bradley Hall was completed in 2008. Restoration work will continue until early 2022.

The grant provides access to a specialized team that are qualified to undertake the restoration. An intricate process will expose the original 1890s surfaces by methodically separating layers of paint. The project also includes the conservation of a 40-foot diameter, 62,000-piece art glass dome that will return natural light that has been blocked since a renovation in the 1930s. Long-lost lighting fixtures that were custom designed for the rooms will be recreated using early photographs and original architectural drawings.

When completed next year, the rooms will reflect their historic appearance, but also facilitate a wider range of free and diverse cultural programming. This includes upgraded lighting, electrical, Wi-Fi and opportunities for artists and organizations to provide a variety of performances and exhibitions.

This project is part of Culture in My Neighborhood, a new collaborative initiative that supports cultural programming at the Chicago Cultural Center, 18 Chicago Park Dis-

Online Program On Architects

Glessner House will conduct an online program, "Frank L. Wright and the Architects of Steinway Hall" on Thursdays, June 17th at 7 p.m.

In 1897, Frank Lloyd Wright, Robert Spencer, Dwight Perkins, and Myron Hunt, all young architects, shared space in Steinway Hall, an office building designed by Perkins. It became a home to Chicago's architectural community, with as many as fifty architects renting space in the building.

This presentation, based on the new book of the same name, is a history of that brief period and an attempt to assess the extent to which these architects collaborated on their architectural designs and the creation of architectural theory which would impact the decades which followed.

Stuart Cohen, author of Frank L. Wright and the Architects of Steinway Hall, is an educator and practicing architect. He is a Fellow of the American Institute of Architects and Professor of Architecture Emeritus at the University of Illinois Chicago. The program is co-sponsored by Pleasant Home. To purchase tickets at $10, visit glessnerhouse.org/programs.
