Many Students Have Anxiety

By Dr. R. Pletsch

If you follow blogs about education, you may have noticed that many educators are worried. They find that from hearing adults and watching news and certain politi-cians, that many children believe that we will be extinct in 10 years. This extinct in 10 years. This leads to anxiety and has educators and parents worried about how to handle this. Students, like all of us, need to have some opti-mistic feelings toward the future. If we are all doomed, why do we need to learn to spell or write to learn to spell or write or any of the other things parents and teachers worry about teaching our students. Some teachers in California are having student-produced pod-casts, looking for reasons to be optimistic in this time of climate change.

The pandemic and its variants helped depress our students even more. People talk about "follow the science". But most don't, they are just reading their interpretations of what someone else said or thinks. One of the factors that goes into this is that those that are in academia live by a rule "publish or perish". In Science Departments, it is almost impossible to get a paper printed if it argues against climate change. So as a professor if you do not want to stay with the company line, you will not be printed and, therefore, face non-promotion.

Teachers are not given the whole picture and many are afraid to make waves. I know a lady who got in trouble with her Board of Ed for simply telling her class that climate change has always existed on earth or we would not have Lake Michigan, which was formed in the Ice Age by glaciers melting. This does not seem controversial, and yet it offended someone.

A survey of middle school and high school teachers by the National Center of Science listed many ways that teachers talk about these issues to students. They are not in trouble, so they must be safe. They appear to deal with personal responsibility, like turning off lights, walking to school, or using the blue cans for recycling properly. No one considers these as controversial, but they do imply this is a solution to climate change. According to many Science curriculum that teachers must follow, there is very little time assigned to the subject of climate change. But our students do hear about it all the time.

The best way to help our students who are really suffering from anxiety is to tell your school health professionals and then let the students know this is not the first and probably not the last time they will hear the warning of apocalypse. People crave to hear these predictions. Thus the popularity of zombie movies. But the kids realize these are invented by writers. I know when you get as old as I am, you have heard so many pre-dictions of doom that I would have been dead ten times already. Remind the students there are some real things in the world to worry about like getting into your first choice for high school or college, helping yourself and your family stay healthy, and making sure those you love know it.

The Department of Cultural Affairs and Special Events announces the first comprehensive retrospective of Robert Colescott (1925-2009), one of America's most provocative artists, at the Chicago Cultural Center, 78 E. Washington (ChicagoCultural st., Center.org).

In his large-scale paintings, Colescott confronted cultural hierarchies involving race, gen-der and social inequality with wit and irony. This free exhibition brings together 55 paintings and works on paper spanning 50 years of his prolific career. The exhibition traces the progression of his stylistic development and the impact of place on his practice, from his adaptations of Bay Area Figuration in the 1950s and 60s, to his graphic style of the 1970s, and the figuration of his later work.

Programming at the Chicago Cultural Center includes Gallery Talks with Daniel Schulman, DCASE Director of Visual Arts, from 12:15– 1pm on Wednesdays, Dec. 15th, Feb. 16th and April 13th.

Utility Relief For Low Income Families

The Illinois Department of Commerce and Economic Opportunity reminded residents of utility relief available to low-income families. Through Governor Pritzker's Help Illinois Fami-lies program, DCEO has launched over $295 million in utility assistance programming available for low-income households and is accepting applications now through May 31, 2022, while funds remain.

Since the program first launched in September, over $84 million in payments have been approved for 77,000 proved for 77,000 households through the Low-income Household Energy Assistance Program. More than $200 million remains available to help cover the cost of heating and energy bills, including expanded benefits provided this year from $750 to $1,000 in ### payments available, on average per household.

The State of Illinois and partners at the Citizens Utility Board are urging residents to take advantage of LIHEAP while funds remain available, and to avoid delaying payments on billing while the annual shut-off moratorium is underway (Dec. 1 – March 31).

Launched in September of this year, the cur-rent 2021-2022 Help Illinois Families program year provides $336 million in household assistance for low-income families – including $295 million for LIHEAP utility bill assistance.

Households at 200% federal poverty level or below are income-eligible.

To apply go to helpillinoisfamilies.com, or contact the hotline service providing real-time assistance in over 30 languages at 1-833-711-0374.

IDOT Website For Road Conditions

The Illinois Depart-ment of Transportation is debuting an improved winter road conditions map on its popular Get-ting Around Illinois website.

The revamped map will show how weather events are impacting roads under the jurisdictions of the more than 120 snow-and-ice team sections that work out of IDOT facilities. Conditions on interstates and U.S. routes, which carry the most traffic, will be given priority reporting status.

A short video on how to utilize the map and review conditions can be viewed at GettingAround Illinois.com
