Taking a look back at History, as we move forward...

When the town of Washington was laid off by Col. James Bonner, about the year 1776, he set aside Lot No. 50 on the plot of the town "for public use of the said township for building a church on." This lot was located at the corner of Main and Bonner Streets, present site of St. Peter's Episcopal Church cemetery. Here, facing Main Street, the first church building in Washington was built. The Free Church was used by all denominations until the year 1800 when the Methodist Church was built. The Baptists, Presbyterians, and Episcopalians continued the use of the Free Church until 1822. At this time, St. Peter's and the Presbyterian Churches were built. The Baptists church secured full ownership of the Free church and became the First Baptist Church of Washington.
