Memorial Day, Thank Them All

By Dr. R. Pletsch

Why do people serve in the military? It has been a complicated question ever since we existed as a nation. Some were drafted, some patriotic, and others enlisted because it was just the right thing to do. We owe a debt of thanks to all who served. All enlistments are vital to our safety and security. Of course, those who were in combat. Ask those who were in combat and they will tell you that both sides can be courageous and deserving, win or lose, their country's thanks even if that country no longer exists.

The question comes out today because of the "cancel culture" efforts. If the person displayed great sacrifice and bravery and saved many lives in his home state, but had inherited a slave, does that then negate his efforts to help his neighbors fight off those that had invaded their homeland? Now would you change your mind if I told you this individual was a Native American? Yes, most tribes had slavery. What if this Native American was also fight-ing for the South, which several tribes did. You can see that imposing 2021 morality on 1860 actions is difficult.

It becomes very clouded when we discuss Native Americans, because most agree they had not been treated fairly. Many fought to defend their lands from other tribes who had "stolen their land". Much of what we know about the Great Plains Indian war comes from movies. But much of the fighting force in the US Cavalry were Native Americans who fought other tribes who they considered had stolen their land. Should we remove the medals and markers that honor their bravery? This is a roundabout way of saying how much we need to thank our Vets, whether he or she worked at a desk, was a mechanic, a fireman on a ship, or a combat infantryman. They all gave what they were asked to do by the government. Thanks to all whoever put on the uniform. Regardless of how promilitary you might be, these Vets, both living and dead, have made us the envy of most of the civilized Remember, our southern border has more people trying to enter the United States than ever recorded. They have counted at least citizens of 142 nations fleeing their own countries to enter the US. Remember when TAPS is played at Arlington, all gave some, some gave all.

The Chicago Department of Housing opened the third round of rental assistance for tenants and landlords since the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic. The Emer-gency Rental Assistance Program includes nearly $80 million funded through the Coronavirus Response and Relief Supplemental Appropri-ation Act signed into law by Congress in December 2020 and will offer up to 15 months of rental assistance and utility payment assistance for renters.

Chicago's ERAP, along with other county and state assistance state assistance programs are designed to keep renters in their homes as well as avoid the kind of multifamily foreclosures that were seen in the wake of the economic crisis. Since the onset of the oandemic, eviction moratoriums at the state and federal levels have provided some protection to tenants who have lost income. Last week, Governor Pritzker announced that the state moratorium on pandemic-related evictions will be phased out by August. During this time, landlords have also struggled to pay their bills due to reduced rent collections. DOH has partnered with The Resurrection Project which will provide case management services to administer 75% of the funds through an online platform designed by Unqork. Additional intake and application processing will be performed by over a dozen delegate agencies and

Online Program On Architects

Glessner House will conduct an online program, "Frank L. Wright and the Architects of Steinway Hall" on Thursdays, June 17th at

In 1897, Frank Lloyd Wright, Robert Spencer, Dwight Perkins, and Myron Hunt, all young architects, shared space in Steinway Hall, an office building designed by Perkins. It became a home to Chicago's architectural community, with as many as fifty architects renting space in the building.

This presentation, based on the new book of the same name, is a history of that brief period and an attempt to assess the extent to which these architects collaborated on architectural  $_{ m their}$ designs and the creation of architectural theory which would impact the decades which followed.

Stuart Cohen, author of Frank L. Wright and the Architects Steinway Hall, is an educator and practicing architect. He is a Fellow of the American Institute Architects Professor of Architecture Emeritus at the University of Illinois Chicago. The program is co-sponsored by Pleasant Home.
